TABOO ON INDECENT POSTALS.

U. S. Government Prosecutes Dealers in Catchy Cards.

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 30.—Six business men, owners of art and stationery stores and news stands, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Howell charged with offering for sale and receiving from common carriers obscene or indecent postal cards. The examination was conducted for the government by Powell Clayton, newly appointed assistant to United States District Attorney Whipple, of Little Rock. Postoffice Inspector Spofford quietly gathered in a sample of alleged objectionable pictures displayed in violation of the U. S. laws.

All of the dealers admitted having sold cards, but denied that they were obscene. They alleged the cards were bought under a guarantee of the manufacturers that they were "safe," and contended that the United States government should not grant a copyright on any pictures which would not be allowed to pass through the mails.

The Federal authorities assented, but held that would not justify a violation of the statute under which they were arrested.

The famous art galleries of New York and Washington were cautiously criticised by both Clayton and the defendants in an Anthony Comstock vein.

Commissioner Howell held that the character of the cards warranted him in holding the defendants to the Federal court and they were released upon their own recognizance to appear in Little Rock at the next term of court.

Auto Car Starts Runaway.

Two little girls screaming in their fright and helplessness as the buggy horse which drew them plunged madly down the street created a deal of excitement on West 14th street Sunday afternoon.

It seems the approach of D. W. Huffor's automobile frightened the children, daughters of A. M. Gregg and E. H. McKendree, worse than it did the horse. Their frightened cries as they dropped the lines alarmed the horse. A sudden turn at the Stockton corner overturned the buggy and hurled the girls to the ground. Fortunately they escaped with a few trivial bruises and the vehicle was by no means demolished beyond repair. Mr. Huffor took the children home in his auto, and now all is well, save with the buggy.

Roadmaster "Mac" Resigns.

"Mac" the genial roadmaster for this end of the Frisco, is to be seen no more rubbering out from the rear end of Frisco-trains in search of rotten ties, etc.

But his new habitat will still include Ada, for he has resigned to accept a like position with the M., K. & T. on the Atoka-Oklahoma branch. He and family spent the night here en route from Francis to their new home, Oklahoma City.

MAY STILL PRESS CONTESTS

Commissary Charlie, Republican Chairman, Despite Roosevelt's Announcement, not Disposed to Abandon Fight Against Officers-Elect.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 30.—Notwithstanding the favorable attitude of President Roosevelt toward the Oklahoma constitution, C. E. Hunter, who, as chairman of the republican state central committee, conducted the losing fight in the recent campaign, will press his threatened contests to prevent those elected to office from taking their seats.

Since the announcement by the president that he will sign the constitution, Chairman Hunter says that he will no longer fight statehood. His contests will be directed entirely against the successful democratic nominees.

Mr. Hunter is now in Guthrie, where he will endeavor to induce Governor

Frantz to reconsider his determination to vacate the governor's office.

"I have no doubt," said Chairman Hunter, "that President Roosevelt has agreed to sign the constitution of our state, giving us statehood, but this will in nowise stop my contest of the persons who committed fraud in the election."

"We are not contesting this election as a means of holding up statehood but it is because of the frauds that were committed. Whether or not the president signs the constitution is of no moment in the prosecution of these parties who have violated the sanctity of their citizenship. They have violated the laws of the country and as such I mean to prosecute them to conviction. They must learn that the dignity of the law in the new state must be upheld."

SHOWS IN ABUNDANCE.

Prospect for Plenty of Amusement During the Month.

Dr. Oppenheimer is in Ada again with his free street show, bigger and better than ever. He has a good eye for picking negro fun makers who know how to entertain a crowd.

W. L. Clark's show is advertised to be in Ada October 10. This big outfit travels through the country independent of the railroads. A car of new fancy wagons consigned to them here is now on the side tracks awaiting delivery.

On October 16th Gollmar Bros. shows will visit Ada. It takes a train of 22 cars to move their belongings. Altogether, it appears the town is to be well supplied with canvass covered amusements during October.

Notice to the Public.

As I think the article in the Evening News was not correct I take this method of putting the case fully before the people. The ladies that went with me to the rooming house was one

Mrs. Sam Barton of Roff, and her two children, from 6 to 12 years old, the other was Mrs. Whittedge, now a resident of Sulphur. As the case was called without my having any notice I didn't have a chance to bring these witnesses in the case. Quite a number of the jurors, both petty and grand know Mrs. Barton, so you can find out who she is and what she is. I haven't saw her since she was here and never saw her before. I hope the good people will fully investigate the case and place the blame where it belongs and I am willing to take the two ladies' testimony and will not say a word in my own behalf and I am willing to stand by your verdict when you get the true status of the case. Parties that are blaming me have had the chance to find out the facts and have not are thieves and liars and will do any one any injury they can that the law will not handle them, for their own personal gain. So if any does not like this come to me and we will settle it at once without any further ceremony.

Entered as second-class mail matter March 25, 1904, at the post office at Ada, Indian Territory, under the Act of Congress March 3, 1879.

THE OKLAHOMA VICTORY.

From the Commoner.

It is not necessary to say that the vote in Oklahoma is a great victory for democrats. The victory speaks for itself.

It is not necessary to say that the faithful democrats of Oklahoma and Indian Territory are entitled to the highest praise for the good work they have done. From every section of the country comes words of congratulation to the democrats of the new state that is prepared to enter the union under particularly fortunate conditions.

Particularly fortunate, we say, because Oklahoma's brief history is inseparably associated with the idea of popular government. When it came to the selection of men who were to write the constitution for the new state it was urged by many that Oklahomans, regardless of political prejudice, ought to trust that duty to the party just then dominant in federal government. But in the campaign for the constitutional convention the promise of democrats seemed to accord with the purpose of the Oklahomans to obtain a charter that would make it plain to all men that government of the people, by the people, for the people was to be the shibboleth for the new state.

The result was that the democrats won by a large majority in the constitutional convention.

It is not an idle statement to say that the proceedings of Oklahoma's constitutional convention were marked with a determination on the part of the members to prepare a constitution that would ensure to the people of the new state practical control, for all time, over their public affairs and their public servants.

It is no idle statement to say that never in the history of deliberative assemblies has any body of men been accorded more general recognition for patriotic effort than was given by men of all parties to Oklahoma's constitutional convention.

In all the proceeding of that great gathering there was no breath of scandal. No one complained that the members were looking out for special interests. No one suggested that their work left loopholes for corporations. It was said that the constitution was too long, but some who made that complaint meant that it was too explicit in its efforts to safe guard the public's interests. When the attorney general of the United States pointed out what he conceived to be certain defects the constitutional convention made corrections accordingly.

It is not strange, then, that it was with some degree of confidence that the men who wrote this constitution submitted their work for the approval of their fellow citizens. With significant emphasis the people of the new state have approved that work and they did it in the face of the implied threat that approval of the constitution and a democratic victory meant rejection of the constitution by a president elected as a republican.

The strong personality of Mr. Roosevelt figured conspicuously in the Oklahoma campaign. Every federal office holder in the two territories was fighting hard for republican victory; and not only was the great prestige of a national administration employed at every point, but the administration was represented in a particularly clear way by the personal participation of the heir apparent to Mr. Roosevelt's party robe. And when Mr. Taft bluntly advised the Oklahomans to vote against the democratic constitution his advice was clearly interpreted as a reminder that the republican administration had the power to unmake the constitution.

But these influences were of no avail. Oklahoma and Indian Territory, ambitious for statehood, wanted to insure for the new commonwealth popular government in its best sense. To this end they entrusted the work of making a constitution to the democratic party and the democratic party proved itself faithful to the trust.

The fidelity shown by the democratic constitutional convention and the purpose displayed by the democratic candidates for office have been recognized and rewarded by a victory so complete that it must give encouragement to all men who participate in politics in the hope of deriving from government "the greatest good to the greatest number."

How to Put in Sleeves.

A reliable and practicable method for putting sleeves in a waist: Place front seam of sleeve at point in armhole where it begins to curve upward in front part of waist. Baste sleeve in plain from two inches above the seam down and underneath dress to within two inches of shoulder, seam in back; gather the top between these two points, placing gathering even. Overcast stitch in before final stitching.

THE NEWS FROM OKLAHOMA.

Got some news from Oklahoma on the Wednesday morning wire; Just some facts about election and they filled us full of fire.

Just some good election figures, and we just leaned back and laughed. At the way young Oklahoma handed lines to William Taft.

Clear from Enid down to Guthrie, and from there to Chickasha. Everything is democratic and we are feeling blythe and gay.

Got some word from Oklahoma and it filled us full of glee—

But there's gobs of gloom now headed straight for Washington, D. C.

Got some word from Oklahoma, and we've swept the platter clean; Licked the grasping corporations and the carpetbag machine.

Forty thousand for the ticket—speed the news upon the way. Till it bumps against the wharfing fronting on Manila Bay.

From Kingfisher to Okmulgee, clear down to the Texas line, Everything is democratic and we're feeling mighty fine.

Bully news from Oklahoma—democratic to the core—

And when Taft gets word about it he will feel almighty sore.

Three times three for Oklahoma! Forty thousand! Hully gee.

Please excuse us if we holler, for our souls are filled with glee. Bucked the whole administration and the g. o. p. machine,

And we whipped 'em, boots and breeches—licked the bloomin' platter clean.

Yes, we heard from Oklahoma, and we swing our hats on high. And our cheers crossed the Pacific to Manila Bay, P. I.

There's a new star on the banner and it's shining mighty bright. And she's safely democratic—Oklahoma, you're all right.

Says Statehood by Oct. 25.

W. H. L. Campbell arrived home from Ardmore. During the last few days he has been attending the session of the court of appeals at McAlester and visited Oklahoma City.

Having been elected clerk of the Oklahoma supreme court, naturally he took pains to inquire into the statehood situation. He says he found nobody, democrat or republican, who takes seriously Charley Hunter's threat to contest the election of the democrats, it being the unanimous opinion of those in touch with the situation that the president will issue his proclamation not later than Oct. 25, and following this all elected officers will take their seats without any hitch.

Some Short Stories.

United States Judge Emory Speer, of the Southern district of Georgia, recently had before his court a typical Georgia mountainer on the typical Georgia charge of illicit distilling.

"What's your name," demanded the eminent jurist.

"Joshua, judge," drawled the prisoner.

"Joshua, who made the sun stand still?" smiled the judge in amusement at the laconic answer.

"No sir, Joshua who made the moon shine," answered the quick witted mountaineer.

And it is needless to say that Judge Speer made the sentence as light as he possibly could, saying to his friends in telling the story that wit like that deserves some recompense.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. J. F. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by druggists 75c.

The Penalty of Fame

By George T. Pardy

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"But I came on purpose to interview you, and my editor will be so cross if you refuse to talk, and I can't make a story up," she said, plaintively.

She was good looking, and no doubt aware of the fact. But had she been Venus herself I should have pursued the same course.

"I am overwhelmed with regret," I observed stiffly.

"It's awfully unkind of you," said she.

"It's the merest self-defense," I responded.

"Now, that tiger skin?" she suggested, insinuatingly. "I'm sure a tale hangs to that!"

"Of-course a tail hangs to it," I replied irritably. "Most tigers have tails. What are you writing there, may I ask?"

Only that your conversation abounds in flashes of brilliant wit, Mr. Horsford—that is all.

"All!" I groaned.

"I should have thought you'd have liked it, you know. Most people do. Now those lovely oriental vases? I suppose one of your ancestors brought them home from—"

"Bought 'em from a Jew!"

"Ah! you poke about in old shops. How interesting! You may often be seen, I expect, peering in the—"

"Never, madam."

"Oh, what a love of a cat! He's your great companion and friend, I'm sure!"

"It's the landlady's, and I kick the beast out whenever I see it."

"Ah, perhaps you suffer from nerves? Most poets do, of course. You must have perfect rest and quiet to—"

"I'm as strong as a horse, thank you."

"And you live quite at home in these lovely rooms?"

"When I can command solitude, madam, I enjoy it."

"Oh, thank you so much! I'll just put that down. It's so characteristic of genius, isn't it? You love to be alone with your thoughts, don't you? I know the feeling so well."

"You do not appear, however, to appreciate it in others."

"Not quite so fast, please; I can't get it all down."

Controlling myself with an effort, I said in firm tones:

"I distinctly forbid you to put in a word about me!"

"Oh, there'll be nothing you can possibly object to, Mr. Horsford—there won't indeed. Do any of your family write poetry besides you?"

"Do any of your family besides you do interviewing?" I retorted. "If so, I should think you are an orphan."

She laughed gleefully and wrote hard for a minute or two.

"There, I've got that," she observed cheerfully. "Now is there anything else that you'd like to tell the public through me?"

I opened the door and stood with my hand on the knob.

"About your books, for instance. How much do you get for—"

"No, thank you," said I with emphasis.

"Or your favorite pursuits?"

"Good morning," said I, opening the door wider.

"Oh, Good morning, Mr. Horsford! Oh, who's that over the mantelpiece? What a sweet face! I'm sure it must be—ah, a secret, is it? Then I mustn't ask, must I? How very interesting, though; I must just refer to it."

"You do—"

"Well, good morning. Thank you much. I'll be sure and send a paper."

Now the above is a full and true record of what passed. The following is an extract from what was published:

Mr. Horsford, when he is at home dwells in the daintiest of apartments. At a glance you can tell that you are in the sanctum of a skilled collector of objects d'art, and your host's deep blue eyes light up with a radiant gleam as he lovingly fondles his priceless oriental pottery. The wall is decked with the skin of a magnificent tiger—the Horsfords have always been mighty hunters, and Mr. Horsford himself can handle a rifle as deftly as he can turn a sonnet. On the cushions of a luxurious sofa there reposes a splendid Persian cat, evidently the companion, friend and pampered pet of its gifted master. Over the mantelpiece hangs the portrait of a beautiful girl, and it is easy to see that this exquisite, artistic gem is not the least of Mr. Horsford's treasures. Space forbids us to catalogue the thousand and one delightful objects which adorn this choice retreat. The tout ensemble is fragrant of lettered ease and wide culture. Nor is the genius lost one whit out of harmony with the surroundings which his matchless taste and untiring diligence in the search for curios have gathered together from the four corners of the earth. Mr. Horsford's slight figure tells, indeed, of a delicate physique and of the sensitive, ever-nervous temperament always associated with supreme poetic gifts. But the brain of the man imparts boundless energy to its frail tenement; the soul looks out alert, passionate, indomitable, through the large eyes, now strangely keen, now so ineffably sympathetic. Sayings full of penetration, hints of over-flowing sympathy with all the sorrows and troubles which afflict the world, mingle and alternate with the most brilliant flashes of wit or the rapturous bursts of the most refined and courteous badinage. Mr. Horsford's, indeed, is a personality which must be encountered to be appreciated; for although he may be studied to some degree in his own priceless poems, yet the man himself seems something above and beyond even the finest of his work, a presence, an influence—in a word—a soul, such as it is refreshing and inspiring to meet amid the grays and drabs of this prosaic age. Never shall we forget the precious hours which Mr. Horsford so kindly spared to us, and we trust that we have not altogether failed to communicate to our readers something of what we were privileged to enjoy when Mr. Horsford made us welcome to his home.

This appeared one morning. In the afternoon I strolled, according to my custom, down to the club. A circle of men sat around the fire. No sooner had I entered, which I tried to do in an unostentatious manner, than I was greeted in this way:

"Excuse my courteous badinage, Horsford, but how's the frail tenement?"

"Blue eyes off color, a bit, eh, old man?"

"Here, come over and be ineffably sympathetic, I've come an awful howl over the Derby."

"I say, Horsford, old man, you must have made yourself infernally pleasant to the girl. What did you really say, now?"

"Out with it, Hors? None of your sly rapturous, y' know."

"Take care, Fred, he's passionate and indomitable."

"Who's the party over the mantel piece? Oh, you old thief!"

"Waiter—bring a cat for Mr. Horsford. He needs a companion and friend."

And then from all of them, a loud chorus, a subdued chant:

"A presence, an influence—in a word—a soul!"

And so the matter stands. I suppose nothing can be done.

Found Treasure in a Tree.

A singular case of treasure trove is reported from the Belgian village of Saint Omer-Capelle, where some boys climbed an old willow tree to rob a bird's nest found in a hole high up in the trunk of an old leather bag.

On opening this they found it to contain what seemed to be bright yellow counters and pieces of paper, bearing writing which they did not understand. So they made playthings of the lot, and gave some away, without, however, anything being damaged.

As soon as the find reached the ears of the parents they naturally guessed the truth. Some among them, being honestly disposed, gave information to the Mairie, which after some trouble resulted in the whole contents of the bag being got together again. They were old notes and gold representing 20,000 francs.

REFORMED BY A DREAM

By MRS. F. M. HOWARD

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

"Grandma, come tie my shoes."

"G'mma, please button my dress."

The old lady hurried to comply with the latter request to the disregard of the first command.

"Tie up your own shoes, dearie, that's a good boy," she said, coaxingly, to the heavy-eyed, fretful looking boy in the nursery.

"I shan't," he retorted sullenly. "I'll tell ma on you if you don't mind me."

"But my bones ache so, sonny," she remonstrated. "It hurts me to get down. Come now, be good to Grandma."

"I don't care. What you here for if 'tain't to work," he said with incipient brutality.

"The Lord knows, sonny, what I'm here for. Seems like there ain't no room in the world for my poor old bones."

"You notty bad boy to make Gamma ky," cried little Rose, striking at him with her little, fat hand. "Pessie loves Gamma, Rosie does," pursued the little comforter, hugging her small arm around the wrinkled neck, "w'en Rosie gets big she'll have a big, splendid house, w' Gamma shall live in it, an' wot'll play all day, won't we, Gamma?"

"I hope so, darlin'." The old lady brushed away a hot tear, for she was not so hardened to abuse that she had gotten beyond the sting of it, and a kind word touched her even more keenly than the harsh ones.

Mrs. Pringle was a second wife. The gentle mother of these children lay sleeping in her grave. She had died when Rosie was born, and the grandmother had brought the babe through the perils of infancy in addition to her other cares. Martin Pringle had married again, after a decent interval, a much more showy and stylish woman than his first wife had been. In strict justice to her, it must be confessed that she was a tolerably kind mother to the children; but the

if she had looked into the face of her companion, she would have seen flashing eyes and lips compressed with inward emotion; but she was too much absorbed in her grief to notice.

"There now, don't think any more about it." The kind hands were untangling her faded bonnet. "I'll go and get you a cup of tea, and that will rest you."

In the meantime there had been a revolution of feeling in the Pringle family. Martin had gone back to his office after seeing his poor old mother on board the train, and as it was a cold day, he sat down before the glowing fire to warm his feet. The walk from the station had been a long one, he seldom employed streetcars, the warm fire made him drowsy and it is probable that his day's experience was answerable for the strange dream that he had. The consciousness of having done a supremely mean act is not a restful pillow for a sleeping imagination, and Mr. Pringle's played him a queer trick. He thought he was at home by his warm, anthracite fire when a stranger opened the door and came in, tall, impressive and stern. Mr. Pringle had no familiar word of greeting for him, although he knew him at once and instinctively. It was the Savior of mankind, and He stretched out a long, majestic arm, with an accusing forefinger pointed toward the unfilial son's heart. "Man, where is thy mother, and the praying one of this house; she who has been your passover for years? Come find her."

A cold sweat broke out on the dreamer's brow as he stammered in shame and contrition, "I have sent her away."

"Even so shall you be sent away."

The words fell with crushing force upon the guilty heart, and with a look of condemning reproach He passed out, and Mr. Pringle was alone, and awake, the cold sweat-drops upon his brow as they had been in his dream, and his limbs trembling with fright.

He hurriedly arose when he could command his trembling limbs, and buttoning up his warm overcoat, he thought with a shiver that the mother's shawl was both old and thin; he started for home.

Sarah was in the hall to meet him. "Sarah, we've done an awful thing," said Martin, his knees beginning to tremble again. "We haven't thought enough about God, and the future, and I'm afraid His smiting hand will be upon us if this wrong isn't made right."

"How can it be made right? She's gone, and what's done can't be undone."

"Yes it can, and I'm going after her. I can go on the limited and catch her before she goes any farther," and then he told her his dream.

Sarah's head drooped. It was fearfully hard for her to give up her will. "Well, perhaps you had better," she said.

They were coming out of the room where they had breakfasted, the old lady's feeble steps supported by the younger one's strong arm, when Mr. Pringle met them, and her eyes rested upon him in terrified surprise.

"Oh, Martin, what is it?" she cried, laying her trembling hand upon his arm, "Is anybody sick or dead at home—is it Rosie?"

"No, no, mother, there is nobody sick or dying," he answered, with a shamefaced look, "but I have come after you, mother. We cannot let you go after all."

The good effects of Martin Pringle's singular dream lasted all through the aged mother's life, and when at last they laid her away for her last long rest, it was with real regret and tears of unfeigned sorrow.

Her eyes were heavy and bleared with many tears, and she seemed half dazed, and stunned by the noisy bustle about her. A faded old valise stood at her feet, and she wearily drew a seed cake from a small bag on her arm, and tried to bite it off with her toothless gums.

"Here, grandmother, have some of my lunch," said a pleasant-faced lady coming from another seat and sitting down beside her. "My daughter has put up so much for me I never can eat it alone, I'm sure." She had been watching the poor old body for a half hour past, with a heart overflowing with pity for her evident loneliness.

"Thank ye kindly, ma'am," replied the old lady, taking a tender sandwich and a soft toothsome piece of cake from the friendly hand.

The Dictates of Fashion

This is the day of the filmy frock and also the day of the heavy linen coat and skirt costume, and as for silk, the latter fabric is made up in almost every sort of frock, simple or elaborate. Silks vary so in every respect save their material that in no other fabric, perhaps, is so great a variety to be found. From the thinnest of Indian and Chinese to the heavy faille, silken robes run a long gamut, and whether plain, figured, chine, or brocaded, they may be either heavy or light in weight as in coloring.

Taffeta is a silk always worn. Of recent years the improvements in this silk have been so great that even the woman of most modest means may essay a taffeta gown without fear of its cracking as it hangs in the closet. The chiffon weaves are soft and supple, and while it must be admitted that the chances are slim for air getting through its close weave, yet it is thin and cool to the touch and weighs almost nothing.

The black and white striped cloths in the very light weights, or the voiles, and also the liberty satins, make up most effectively.

The blue serges for traveling and hackabout wear must not be overlooked. Many severe tailor-mades in blue serge with no other ornament except a few rows of stitching are among the smartest of the traveling costumes in evidence in the smart restaurants and on the avenue and at the railway stations. The chic serge with its perfect lines is as remote from the cheap copy as diamonds from glass. If a woman is so circumstanced as not to be able to afford the former, let her choose some other material.

The long pongee or rajah traveling coats for train and motor wear are indispensable, and the woman with a small income will find one invaluable. Coming from the neck to the hem of the gown, they protect and conceal a thin frock suitable for luncheon or theater wear, and being light and thin, are not cumbersome to have thrown over one's arm, or temporarily stored away, and as for musing, they do not muss easily, and when they do a warm iron repairs damage. The heavier rajahs are more satisfactory than pongees, as they do not muss so readily nor spot and crinkle when wet, and anyone addicted to motoring will sometimes get caught in the rain.

Striped materials have been so much the vogue the past spring and also this summer in the ready-made coat costumes that there is little prospect of their being smart for autumn wear. The shepherd's plaids, however, will, as for some years past, be worn by modish women. This particular plaid or check has for several years been more or less worn by well-dressed women, although the great body of women prefer other costume material. This is probably because checked cloths are worn for outdoor, traveling and formal costume generally by the smart woman, as well as sometimes in elaborate gowns for formal wear, while her poorer sister must make one or two costumes take the place of the dozen of the woman of wealth, and so selects fabrics that properly made will look well when she makes a morning call, or attends an afternoon tea; one that is suitable for shopping and for the theater, too.

Really, no hard and fast lines can well be laid down in these matters, and the good judgment and taste of the individual, or the reverse, come into play when choosing gowns.

It is rather deplorable that the first choice of the multitude of women of small means is that of black for cheap frocks. Black material for gowns should be of the best, else it looks like rags. Blues, grays, and other colors are far better. Grays are a safe selection in almost anything. Browns are not only far more trying unless the proper tones are selected, but are not so durable in the matter of wear or of fading. These matters, of course, do not count with the woman of means, but the poor woman cannot afford to overlook such facts.

As to the three frocks shown in our large picture, No. 1 is of pale gray voile with hems and collar of pale gray cloth, and the gray crinoline hat is covered with ruches of white tulle hemmed with gray ribbon.

No. 2 is a lilac-tinted muslin spotted with white, with a lace vest outlined with a fichu of muslin; and crowned with a white chip hat lined with black and trimmed with white ostrich feathers, it says the last word of dainty elegance.

But no mere dress may have a last word—that's woman's privilege for all time, and I'll express mine—for the moment—in admiration of that last sketch of a frock of lavender-blue tussore, with bands of ecru lawn embroidery piped with purple silk, the purple hat which completes it bearing purple plumes with becoming grace.

Two Views of Drink.

"I ain't had a nip fo' 's much 's a half hounh," remarked the Kentucky Colonel when he and Edie came down to take dinner with the woman. "Now, I suppose you haven't got a little something about the house in a bottle, have you, to drink?"

"No," said the woman, "I haven't. I never keep anything of the sort about the house. I'm afraid of drinkin' it."

"I'd hate to think of keepin' anythin' of the sort about the house without drinkin' it," said the Colonel.

MAY STILL PRESS CONTESTS

Commissary Charlie, Republican Chairman, Despite Roosevelt's Announcement, not Disposed to Abandon Fight Against Officers-Elect.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 30.—Notwithstanding the favorable attitude of President Roosevelt toward the Oklahoma constitution C. E. Hunter who, as chairman of the republican state central committee conducted the losing fight in the recent campaign will press his threatened contests to prevent those elected to office from taking their seats.

Since the announcement by the president that he will sign the constitution Chairman Hunter says that he will no longer fight statehood. His contests will be directed entirely against the successful democratic nominees. Mr. Hunter is now in Guthrie where he will endeavor to induce Governor

Liantz to reconsider his determination to create the governor's office.

I have no doubt said Chairman Hunter that President Roosevelt has agreed to sign the constitution of our state, giving us statehood but this will in no wise stop my contest of the persons who committed fraud in the election.

We are not contesting this election as a means of holding up statehood but it is because of the frauds that were committed. Whether or not the president signs the constitution is of no moment in the prosecution of these parties who have violated the sanctity of their citizenship. They have violated the laws of the country and as such I mean to prosecute them to conviction. They must learn that the dignity of the law in the new state must be upheld.

Prospect for Plenty of Amusement During the Month.

Dr. Oppenheimer is in Ada again with his free street show bigger and better than ever. He has a good eye for picking negro fun makers who know how to entertain a crowd.

W. I. Clark's show is advertised to be in Ada October 10. This big outfit travels through the country independent of the railroads. A car of new fancy wagons assigned to them here is now on the side tracks awaiting delivery.

On October 16th Gollman Bros' shows will visit Ada. It takes a train of 22 cars to move their belongings. Altogether it appears the town is to be well supplied with amusements during October.

Notice to the Public.

As I think the article in the Evening News was not correct I take this method of putting the case fully before the people. The ladies that went with me to the rooming house was one

Mrs. Sarah Burton of Rott and her two children from 6 to 12 years old the other was Mrs. Whitledge now a resident of Sulphur. As the case was called without my having any notice I did not have a chance to bring these witnesses to the case. Quite a number of the jurors both petty and grand know Mrs. Burton so you can find out who she is and what she is. I haven't seen her since she was here and never saw her before. I hope the good people will fully investigate the case and place the blame where it belongs and I am willing to take the two ladies testimony and will not say a word in my own behalf and I am willing to stand by your verdict when you get the true status of the case. Parties that are blaming me have had the chance to find out the facts and have not. Are thieves and liars and will do any one any injury they can that the law will not handle them for their own personal gain. So if any does not like this come to me and we will settle it at once without any further ceremony.

TABOO ON INDICENT POSTERS.

U. S. Government Prosecutes Dealers in Tawdry Cards.

Hot Springs, Ark., Sept. 30.—Six business men, owners of art and stationery stores and news stands were arraigned before United States Commissioner Howell charged with offering for sale and receiving from common carriers obscene or indecent postal cards. The examination was conducted for the government by Powell Clayton, newly appointed assistant to United States District Attorney Whipple of Little Rock. Postoffice Inspector Spofford quickly gathered in a sample of alleged objectionable pictures displayed in violation of the U. S. laws.

All of the dealers admitted having sold cards but denied that they were obscene. They alleged the cards were bought under a guarantee of the manufacturers that they were "safe" and contended that the United States government should not grant a copyright on any pictures which would not be allowed to pass through the mails.

The Federal authorities assented but held that would not justify a violation of the statute under which they were arrested.

The famous art galleries of New York and Washington were cautiously criticized by both Clayton and the defendants in an Anthony Comstock vein.

Commissioner Howell held that the character of the cards warranted him in holding the defendants to the Federal court and they were released upon their own recognizance to appear in Little Rock at the next term of court.

It is frightened cries as they fled the horses started the horse. A sudden turn at the intersection of the street and the horse and buggy to the ground. Fortunately the car was with a few minutes' rest and the children home in his car. It is well save with the buggy.

THE OKLAHOMA VICTORY.

From the Commoner

It is not necessary to say that the vote in Oklahoma is a great victory for democracy. The victory speaks for itself.

It is not necessary to say that the faithful democrats of Oklahoma, the Indian Territory are entitled to the highest praise for the good work they have done. From every section of the country comes words of congratulation to the democrats of the new state that is prepared to enter the union under particularly fortunate conditions.

Particularly fortunate we say because Oklahoma's brief history is inseparably associated with the idea of popular government. When it came to the selection of men who were to write the constitution for the new state it was urged by many that Oklahomans, regardless of political prejudice ought to trust that duty to the party just then dominant in federal government. But in the campaign for the constitutional convention the promise of democrats seemed to accord with the purpose of the Oklahomans to obtain a charter that would make it plain to all men that government of the people by the people for the people was to be the shibboleth for the new state.

The result was that the democrats won by a large majority in the constitutional convention.

It is not an idle statement to say that the proceedings of Oklahoma's constitutional convention were marked with a determination on the part of the members to prepare a constitution that would ensure to the people of the new state practical control for all time, over their public affairs and their public servants.

It is no idle statement to say that never in the history of deliberative assemblies has any body of men been accorded more general recognition for patriotic effort than was given by men of all parties to Oklahoma's constitutional convention.

In all the proceeding of that great gathering there was no breath of scandal. No one complained that the members were looking out for special interests. No one suggested that their work left loopholes for corporations. It was said that the constitution was too long, but some who made that complaint meant that it was too explicit in its efforts to safeguard the public interests. When the attorney general of the United States pointed out what he conceived to be even minor defects the constitutional convention made corrections accordingly.

It is not strange then that it was with some degree of confidence that the men who wrote this constitution submitted their work for the approval of their fellow citizens. With significant emphasis the people of the new state have approved that work and they did it in the face of the implied threat that approval of the constitution would mean a democratic victory and a rejection of the constitution would mean a republican triumph.

The strong personality of Mr. Roosevelt figured conspicuously in the Oklahoma campaign. Every day of the campaign the two territories with a hint held for a republican victory and not only was the great prestige of a national administration employed at every point but the administration was presented in a particularly clean way by the personal participation of the hero apparent to Mr. Roosevelt's party robe. And when Mr. Taft bluntly advised the Oklahomans to vote against the democratic constitution his advice was clearly interpreted as a reminder that the republican administration had the power to unmake the constitution.

But these influences were of no avail. Oklahoma and Indian Territory ambitious for statehood wanted to insure for the new commonwealth popular government in its best sense. To this end they entrusted the work of making a constitution to the democratic party and the democratic party proved itself faithful to the trust.

The fidelity shown by the democratic constitutional convention and the purpose displayed by the democratic candidates for office have been recognized and rewarded by a victory so complete that it must give encouragement to all men who participate in politics in the hope of deriving from government "the greatest good to the greatest number."

How to Put in Sleeves.

A reliable and practicable method for putting sleeves in a waist. Place front seam of sleeve at point in armhole where it begins to curve upward in front part of waist. Baste sleeve in plain from two inches above the seam down and underneath dress to within two inches of shoulder, seam in back gather the top between these two points, placing gathering even over each stitch in before final stitching.

THE NEWS FROM OKLAHOMA.

Got some news from Oklahoma on the Wednesday morning wire. Just some facts about election and they filled us full of fire.

Just some good election figures and we just leaned back and laughed.

At the way young Oklahoma handed lines to William Taft.

Clear from Land down to Guthrie and from there to Chickasha.

Everything is democratic and we are feeling pretty good.

Edison and from Oklahoma and it rilled us full of fire.

But there's some of gloom now headed straight for William Taft.

Our son word from Oklahoma and we saw the picture clear.

Indeed the business corporations and the capital machine.

Some Short Stories.

Entire States Judge Lantry Speer of the Southern district of Georgia recently had before his court a typical Georgia mountaineer on the typical Georgia charge of illicit distilling.

What's your name, demanded the eminent jurist.

Joshua, judge, drawled the prisoner.

Joshua who made the sun stand still? snarled the judge in amusement at the laconic answer.

No sir, Joshua who made the moon shine answered the quick-witted mountaineer.

And it is needless to say that Judge Speer made the sentence as light as he possibly could, saying to his friends in telling the story that wit like that deserves some recompense.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. J. F. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by druggists 75c.

TABOO ON INDICENT POSTALS.

U. S. Government Prosecutes Dealers in Lascivious Cards.

Hot Springs Ark. Sept. 30.—Six business men owners of art and stationery stores and news stands were arraigned before United States Commissioner Howell charged with offering for sale and receiving from common carriers obscene or indecent postal cards. The examination was conducted for the government by Powell Clayton newly appointed assistant to United States District Attorney Whipple of Little Rock. Postoffice Inspector Spofford quickly gathered in a sample of alleged objectionable pictures displayed in violation of the U. S. laws.

All of the dealers admitted having sold cards but denied that they were obscene. They alleged the cards were bought under a guarantee of the manufacturers that they were "safe" and contended that the United States government should not grant a copyright on any pictures which would not be allowed to pass through the mails.

The Federal authorities assented but held that would not justify a violation of the statute under which they were arrested.

The famous art galleries of New York and Washington were cautiously criticised by both Clayton and the defendants in an Anthony Comstock vein.

Commissioner Howell held that the character of the cards warranted him in holding the defendants to the Federal court and they were released upon their own recognizance to appear in Little Rock at the next term of court.

Auto Car Starts Runaway.

Two little girls screaming in their fright and helplessness as the lucky horse which drew them plunged madly down the street created a deal of excitement on West 11th street Sunday afternoon.

It seems the approach of D. W. Hunter's automobile frightened the children daughters of A. M. Greck and E. H. McKendree worse than it did the horse. It is frightened cries as they leaped the lines, dived the horse and fell in at the Stockton street intersection the buggy and horse rolled to the ground. Fortunately it was a new model runabout and the vehicle was a no more dangerous than a toy. Mr. Hunter took the children home in his car and all is well save with the buggy.

MAY STILL PRESS CONTESTS

Commissary Charlie, Republican Chairman, Despite Roosevelt's Announcement, not Disposed to Abandon Fight Against Officers-Elect.

Oklahoma City Sept. 30.—Notwithstanding the favorable attitude of President Roosevelt toward the Oklahoma constitution C. E. Hunter who, as chairman of the republican state central committee conducted the losing fight in the recent campaign will press his threatened contests to prevent those elected to office from taking their seats.

Since the announcement by the president that he will sign the constitution chairman Hunter says that he will no longer fight statehood. His contests will be directed entirely against the successful democratic nominees.

Mr. Hunter is now in Guthrie where he will endeavor to induce Governor

Grant to reconsider his determination to vacate the governor's office.

I have no doubt said Chairman Hunter that President Roosevelt has agreed to sign the constitution of our state, giving us statehood but this will in no wise stop my contest of the persons who committed fraud in the election.

We are not contesting this election as a means of holding up statehood but it is because of the frauds that were committed. Whether or not the president signs the constitution is of no moment in the prosecution of these parties who have violated the sanctity of their citizenship. They have violated the laws of the country and as such I mean to prosecute them to conviction. They must learn that the dignity of the law in the new state must be upheld.

Dr. Oppenheimer is in Ada again with his fire street show bigger and better than ever. He has a good eye for picking up to him riders who know how to entertain a crowd.

W. I. Clark's show is advertised to be in Ada October 10. This big outfit travels through the country independent of the railroads. A car of new fancy wagons assigned to them here is now on the side tracks awaiting delivery.

On October 16th Gollman Bros' shows will visit Ada. It takes a train of 22 cars to move their belongings. Altogether it appears the town is to be well supplied with circus covered amusements during October.

Notice to the Public.

As I think the article in the Evening News was not correct I take this method of putting the case fully before the people. The ladies that went with me to the rooming house was one

Mrs. S. Barton of Rott and her two children from 6 to 12 years old the other was Mrs. Whitledge now a resident of Sulphur. As the case was called without my having any notice I didn't have a chance to bring these witnesses in the case. Quite a number of the jurors both petty and grand know Mrs. Barton so you can find out who she is and what she is. I haven't seen her since she was here and never saw her before. I hope the good people will fully investigate the case and place the blame where it belongs and I am willing to take the two ladies' statements and will not say a word in my own behalf and I am willing to stand by your verdict when you get the true status of the case. Parties that are blaming me have had the chance to find out the facts and have not. I am a thief and I will do any one any injury they can that the law will not handle them for their own personal gain. So if any does not like this come to me and we will settle it at once without any further ceremony.

THE OKLAHOMA VICTORY.

From the Commoner

It is not necessary to say that the vote in Oklahoma is a great victory for democracy. The victory speaks for itself.

It is not necessary to say that the faithful democrats of Oklahoma in Indian Territory are entitled to the highest praise for the good work they have done. From every section of the country comes words of congratulation to the democrats of the new state that is prepared to enter the union under particularly fortunate conditions.

Particularly fortunate we say because Oklahoma's brief history is inseparably associated with the idea of popular government. When it came to the selection of men who were to write the constitution for the new state it was urged by many that Oklahomans regardless of political prejudice ought to trust that duty to the party just then dominant in federal government. But in the campaign for the constitutional convention the promise of democrats seemed to accord with the purpose of the Oklahomans to obtain a charter that would make it plain to all men that government of the people by the people for the people was to be the shibboleth for the new state.

The result was that the democrats won by a large majority in the constitutional convention.

It is not an idle statement to say that the proceedings of Oklahoma's constitutional convention were marked with a determination on the part of the members to prepare a constitution that would ensure to the people of the new state practical control for all time, over their public affairs and their public servants.

It is no idle statement to say that never in the history of deliberative assemblies has any body of men been accorded more general recognition for patriotic effort than was given by men of all parties to Oklahoma's constitutional convention.

In all the proceeding of that great gathering there was no breath of scandal. No one complained that the members were looking out for special interests. No one suggested that their work left loopholes for corporations. It was said that the constitution was too long, but some who made that complaint meant that it was too explicit in its efforts to safeguard the public interests. When the attorney general of the United States pointed out what he conceived to be certain defects the constitutional convention made corrections accordingly.

It is not strange then that it was with some degree of confidence that the men who wrote this constitution submitted their work for the approval of their fellow citizens. With significant exceptions the people of the new state have approved that work and they did it in the face of the implied threat that approval of the constitution and a democratic victory meant rejection of the constitution.

The strong personality of Mr. Roosevelt figured conspicuously in the Oklahoma campaign. It is fair to say that he held a torch to the democrats who were fighting hard for a republican victory, and not only was the great prestige of a national administration employed at every point but the administration was represented in a particularly clear way by the personal participation of the hero apparent to Mr. Roosevelt's party robe. And when Mr. Taft bluntly advised the Oklahomans to vote against the democratic constitution his advice was clearly interpreted as a reminder that the republican administration had the power to unmake the constitution.

But these influences were of no avail. Oklahoma and Indian Territory ambitious for statehood wanted to insure for the new commonwealth popular government in its best sense. To this end they entrusted the work of making a constitution to the democratic party and the democratic party proved itself faithful to the trust.

The fidelity shown by the democratic constitutional convention and the purpose displayed by the democratic candidates for office have been recognized and rewarded by a victory so complete that it must give encouragement to all men who participate in politics in the hope of deriving from government "the greatest good to the greatest number."

How to Put in Sleeves.

A reliable and practicable method for putting sleeves in a waist. Place front seam of sleeve at point in armhole where it begins to curve upward in front part of waist. Baste sleeve in plain from two inches above the seam down and underneath dress to within two inches of shoulder, seam in back gather the top between these two points, placing gathering even over-cast stitch in before final stitching.

THE NEWS FROM OKLAHOMA.

Got some news from Oklahoma on the Wednesday morning wire.

Just some riots about election and they filled us full of fire.

Just some good election figures and we just leaned back and laughed.

At the way young Oklahoma handed lines to William Taft.

Clear from Land down to Guthrie and from there to Chickasha.

Everything is democratic and we are feeling like the Indians.

Edison would not Oklahoma and it filled us full of fire.

But there's lots of bloom now headed straight for William Taft.

For some word from Oklahoma and we are swift to get on our feet.

Under the auspices of corporations and the capital machine.

Forty thousand for the ticket—spread the news, pass the way.

Full of news, just the wharfing, fronting, on Manila Bay.

From Kingfisher to Okmulgee, clean down to the Texas line.

Everything is democratic and we are feeling mighty fine.

Bully news from Oklahoma—democratic to the core.

And when Taft gets word about it he will feel almighty sore.

Three times three for Oklahoma! Forty thousand. Bully gee.

Please excuse us if we holler for our souls are filled with glee.

Bucked the whole administration and the g o p machine.

And we whipped 'em boots and breeches—licked the bloomin' platter clean.

Yes we heard from Oklahoma and we swing our hats on high.

And our cheers crossed the Pacific to Manila Bay P I.

There's a new star on the banner and it's shining mighty bright.

And she's safely democratic—Oklahoma you're all right.

The Penalty of Fame

But I came on purpose to tell you, and my editor will be so cross if you refuse to talk and I can't make a story up she said plaintively.

She was good looking and no doubt aware of the fact. But had she been Venus herself I should have pursued the same course.

"I am overwhelmed with regret," I observed stiffly.

"It's awfully unkind of you," said she.

"It's the merest self-defense," I responded.

"Now that tiger skin," she suggested insinuatingly. "I'm sure a tale hangs to that!"

"Of course a tail hangs to it," I replied irritably. "Most tigers have tails. What are you writing there, may I ask?"

"Only that you conversation abounds in flashes of brilliant wit," Mr. Horsford—that is all."

"All?" I groaned.

"I should have thought you'd have liked it, you know. Most people do."

"Now those lovely oriental vases?" I suppose one of your ancestors brought them home from—

"Bought 'em from a Jew!"

"Ah! you poke about in old shops?"

"How interesting! You may often have seen I expect peering in the—"

"Never madam."

"Oh, what a love of a cat!"

"Your great companion and friend I'm sure!"

"It's the landlady's and I kick the beast out whenever I see it!"

"Ah, perhaps you suffer from nerves?"

"Most poets do, of course. You must have perfect rest and quiet to—"

"I'm as strong as a horse," thank you.

"And you live quite at home in these lovely rooms?"

"When I can command solitude, madam, I enjoy it."

"Oh, thank you so much! It just put that down. It's so characteristic of genius isn't it? You love to be alone with your thoughts, don't you?"

"I know the feeling so well."

"You do not appear however to appreciate it in others."

"Not quite so fast, please. I can't get it all down."

"Controlling myself with an effort," I said in firm tones.

"I distinctly forbid you to put in a word about me!"

"Oh, there'll be nothing you can possibly object to," Mr. Horsford—there won't indeed. Do any of your family write poetry besides you?"

"Do any of your family besides you do interviewing?" I retorted. "If so I should think you are an orphan."

"She laughed gleefully and wrote hard for a minute or two."

"There I've got that," she observed cheerfully. "Now is there anything else that you'd like to tell the public through me?"

"I opened the door and stood with my hand on the knob."

"About your books, for instance."

"How much do you get for—"

"No, thank you," said I with emphasis.

"Or your favorite pursuits?"

"Good morning," said I, opening the door wider.

"Oh, Good morning, Mr. Horsford! Oh, who's that over the mantelpiece? What a sweet face! I'm sure it must be—ab, a secret! Is it? Then I mustn't ask, must I? How very interesting, though, I must just refer to it!"

"You do—"

"All, good morning. Thank you so much. I'll be sure and send a paper."

"Now the above is a full and true record of what passed. The following is an extract from what was published."

"Mr. Horsford, when he is at home, he is in the district of apartment. At a glance you can tell that you are in the—"

REFORMED BY A DREAM

Grandma, come to my shoes.

Gmma, please button my dress.

The old lady hurried to comply with the latter request to the disregard of the first.

"Tie up your own shoes, dearie."

"That's a good boy," she said, condescendingly to the heavy-eyed fretful looking boy in the nursery.

"I shan't," he retorted sullenly. "I'll tell you on you if you don't rub me."

But my bones ache so, sonny."

she remonstrated. "It hurts me to get down. Come now, be good to Grandma."

"I don't care. What you here for if I can't to work," he said with insolent brutality.

The Lord knows, sonny, what I'm here for. Seems like there ain't no room in the world for my poor old bones."

You noddie bad boy to make Gamma cry," cried little Rose, striking at him with her little fat hand. "Gamma loves Gamma, Rosie does."

"I noddie Gamma, Rosie does," said the little comforter, hugging her small arm around the wrinkled neck. When Rose dits big shall have a big, splendid house as Gamma shall live in it an' we'll play all day wout we Gamma."

"I like so daitin. The old lady braved away a but tear for she was not so hardened to abuse that she had gotten beyond the sting of it and a kind word touched her even more keenly than the harsh ones."

Mrs. Pringle was a second wife. The gentle mother of these children lay sleeping in her grave. She had died when Rosie was born and the grandmother had brought the babe through the perils of infancy in addition to her other cares. Martin Pringle had married again after a decent interval a much more showy and stylish woman than his first wife had been. In strict justice to her it must be confessed that she was a tolerably kind mother to the children. But the

Are you going far, grandmother?" asked the stranger.

"Yes, ma'am, away off to Boston."

"To Boston? Surely you are not going there alone at your age?"

"Yes, all alone. The aged lip quivered like a child's."

Going to visit your friends? I suppose with friendly curiosity."

No! the old lady shook her head mournfully. "I don't expect to find anybody there that I know, but—but—"

—my son reckoned that as I can't from there I had a claim to be took care of by that country as so I'm agoin' to—the poor—"

She broke down there and with muffled sobs hid her old face in the corner of her gown.

The lady laid her hand gently on the bowed head, her heart swelling with a pity and indignation. There, there, mother, don't cry, she said tenderly, and this son of yours is he so very poor he cannot take care of you himself?"

Oh no! the bowed head lifted a little. He's right well to do, but you see he's married a new wife that ain't been so long acquainted with me as then, too I'm too old to work an' I ain't stylish an' nice like Miss Pringle would like me to be. She expects company for over Christmas a dreadful stylish lady from New York an' they sarter felt ashamed o' me. I reckon an' besides, Sarv wanted my room for her company so here I am."

She tried to smile through her tears. It putty nith broke my heart, ma'am, a layin' em all for though they was putty harsh some times they was all I had."

If she had looked into the face of her companion she would have seen flashing eyes and lips compressed with inward emotion, but she was too much absorbed in her grief to notice.

There now, don't think any more about it. The kind hands were untangling her faded bonnet. "I'll go and get you a cup of tea and that will rest you."

In the meantime there had been a revolution of feeling in the Pringle family. Martin had gone back to his office after seeing his poor old mother on board the train and as it was a cold day he sat down before the glowing fire to warm his feet. The walk from the station had been a long one, he seldom employed streetcars, and the warm fire made him drowsy, and it is probable that his day's experience was answerable for the strange dream that he had. The consciousness of having done a supremely mean act is not a restful pillow for a sleeping imagination and Mr. Pringle played him a queer trick. He thought he was at home by his warm anthracite fire when a stranger opened the door and came in tall, impressive and stern. Mr. Pringle had no familiar word of greeting for him, although he knew him at once and instinctively. It was the Savior of mankind and He stretched out a long majestic arm with an accusing forefinger pointed toward the unfeeling son's heart. "Man, where is thy mother and the praying one of this house, she who has been your passport for years?" Come find her.

A cold sweat broke out on the dreamer's brow as he staggered in shame and contrition. I have sent her away."

I've so shall you be sent away. The words fell with crushing force upon the guilty heart and with a look of condemning reproach He pressed out and Mr. Pringle was alone and awake the cold sweat drops upon his brow as they had been in his dream and his limbs trembling with fight.

He hurriedly arose when he could command his trembling limbs and buttoning up his warm overcoat he thought with a shiver that the moth-eaten shawl was both old and thin. He started for home.

Sarah was in the hall to meet him. Sarah we've done an awful thing, said Martin, his knees beginning to tremble again. We haven't thought enough about God and the future and I'm afraid His smiling hand will be upon us if this wrong isn't made right."

How can it be made right? She asked, gone and what's done can't be undone.

Yes, it can and I'm going after her. I can go on the limited and catch her before she goes any farther, and then he told her his dream.

Sarah's head drooped. It was fearfully hard for her to give up her will. Well, perhaps you had better, she said.

They were coming out of the room where they had breakfasted the old lady's feeble steps supported by the younger one's strong arm, when Mr. Pringle met them and her eyes rested upon him in terrified surprise.

Oh, Martin, what is it? she cried, laying her trembling hand upon his arm. "Is anybody sick or dead at home—is it Rosie?"

No, no, mother, there is nobody sick or dying," he answered with a shame-faced look. "But I have come after you, mother. We cannot let you go after all."

The good effects of Martin Pringle's singular dream lasted all through the aged mother's life, and when at last they laid her away for her last long rest, it was with real regret and tears of unfeigned sorrow."

'Even So Shall You Be Sent Away'

old lady had dropped from her position of house mother to that of house old drudge under her rule so naturally that the transition was hardly noticed in the family.

Fred Pringle how often have I told you not to come to the table until your shoes were properly laced."

The son and he had come in his shoes laced dragging behind him Grandma wouldn't let em for me. Mean old thing!"

Your mother is getting crosser every day of her life. Mrs. Pringle turned to her husband with a reproachful air as if he was very much to blame for being the son of such a reprehensible mother.

Gramma's back hurt so she couldn't stoop down said little Rosie in defiance.

First we know she'll be laid up on her hands with inflammatory rheumatism. Mrs. Pringle took a new tack of alarm. I tell you, Martin, Pringle, here's going to be a change in this family and before long too. I am not going to be tied down to nursing a sick old woman. I can tell you that.

Well, well, I'm in a hurry and haven't time to talk about it now. Mr. Pringle bolted his food and mumbled his reply crossly.

Six weeks from that day there was a poor, decrepit bundle of humanity sitting dejected in a corner of one of the great depots of Chicago.

Her eyes were heavy and bleared with many tears and she seemed half dazed, and stunned by the noisy bustle about her. A faded old valise stood at her feet, and she wearily drew a seed cake from a small bag on her arm, and tried to bite it off with her toothless gums.

Here, grandmother, have some of my lunch," said a pleasant-faced lady coming from another seat and sitting down beside her. "My daughter has put up so much for me I never can eat it alone. I'm sure." She had been watching the poor old body for a half hour past, with a heart overflowing with pity for her evident loneliness.

"Thank ye kindly, ma'am," replied the old lady, taking a tender and rich and a soft toothsome piece of cake from the friendly hand.

The Dictates of Fashion

This is the day of the filmy frock and also the day of the heavy linen coat and skirt costume and as for silk the latter fabric is made up in almost every sort of frock simple or elaborate. Silks vary so in every respect save their material that in no other fabric perhaps is so great variety to be found. From the thinnest of Indias and Chinas to the heavy fall silk robes run a long gamut and whether plain figured chine or brocaded they may be either heavy or light in weight as in coloring.

Taffeta is a silk always worn. Of recent years the improvements in this silk have been so great that even the woman of most modest means may essay a taffeta gown without fear of its cracking as it hangs in the closet. The chiffon weaves are soft and supple and while it must be admitted that the chances are slim for air getting through its close weave yet it is thin and cool to the touch and weighs almost nothing.

The black and white striped cloths in the very light weights or the voiles and also the liberty satins make up most effectively.

The blue serges for traveling and hackabout wear must not be overlooked. Many severe tailor-mades in blue serge with no other ornament except a few rows of stitching are among the smartest of the traveling costumes in evidence in the smart restaurants and on the avenue and at the railway stations. The chic serge with its perfect lines is as remote from the cheap copy as diamonds from glass. If a woman is so circumstanced as not to be able to afford the latter let her choose some other material.

The long pongee or rajah traveling coats for train and motor wear are indispensable and the woman with a small income will find one invaluable. Coming from the neck to the hem of the gown they protect and conceal a thin frock suitable for luncheon or theater wear and being light and thin are not cumbersome to have thrown over one's arm or temporarily stored away and as for musing they do not muss easily and when they do a warm iron repairs damage. The heavier rajahs are more satisfactory than pongees as they do not muss so readily nor spot and crinkle when wet and anyone addicted to motoring will sometimes get caught in the rain.

Striped materials have been so much the vogue the past spring and also this summer in the ready-made coat costumes that there is little prospect of their being smart for autumn wear. The shepherd's plaids however, will, as for some years past, be worn by modish women. This particular plaid or check has for several years been more or less worn by well-dressed women, although the great body of women prefer other costume material. This is probably because checked cloths are worn for outdoor traveling and formal costumes generally by the smart woman as well as sometimes in elaborate gowns for formal wear, while her poorer sister must make one or two costumes take the place of the dozen of the woman of wealth, and so selects fabrics that properly made will look well when she makes a morning call, or attends an afternoon tea, one that is suitable for shopping and for the theater too.

Really, no hard and fast lines can well be laid down in these matters, and the good judgment and taste of the individual, or the reverse, come into play when choosing gowns.

It is rather deplorable that the first choice of the multitude of women of small means is that of black for cheap frocks. Black material for gowns should be of the best, else it looks like rags. Blues, grays and other colors are far better. Grays are a safe selection in almost anything. Browns are not only far more trying unless the proper tones are selected, but are not so durable in the matter of wear or of fading. These matters, of course do not count with the woman of means, but the poor woman cannot afford to overlook such facts.

As to the three frocks shown in our large picture No. 1 is of pale gray voile with hems and collar of pale gray cloth and the gray crinoline hat is covered with ruffles of white tulle hemmed with gray ribbon.

No. 2 is a lilac tinted muslin spotted with white, with a lace vest outlined with a fleche of muslin, and crowned with a white chip hat lined with black and trimmed with white ostrich feathers. It says the last word of dainty elegance.

But no mere dress may have a last word—that's woman's privilege for all time and I'll express mine—for the moment—in admiration of that last sketch of a frock of lavender blue tussore, with bands of ecru lawn embroidery piped with purple silk, the purple hat which completes it bearing purple plumes with becoming grace.

Two Views of Drink.

"I ain't had a nip for 's much 's a half hour," remarked the Kentucky Colonel when he and Edie came down to take dinner with the woman. "Now, I suppose you haven't got a little something about the house in a bottle, have you, to drink?"

"No," said the woman, "I haven't. I never keep anything of the sort about the house. I'm afraid of drinkin' it."

"I'd hate to think of keepin' anythin' of the sort about the house without drinkin' it," said the Colonel.
